—A good country road is always to be desired and is a source of comfort and convenience to every traveler. Good roads attract population, as well as good schools and churches. Good roads improve the value of property, so that it is said a farm lying five miles from market connected by a bad road is of less value than an equally good farm lying ten miles away from market connected by a good road. A larger load can be drawn by one horse over a good road than by two over a bad one. Good roads encourage the greater exchange of products and commodities between one section and another.

—Numerous homes about Pemberville have been greatly improved this spring by the application of paint. Nothing improves the appearance of a town so much as its well-painted homes, and, as there is a wide-spread movement along this line, keep the good work up, as the expense is well justified in the preserving of the building to say nothing of the improvement in appearance.
